

To whom it may concern

Here is a brief overview of our proposed project, aimed at addressing the critical needs of Palestinian and Syrian refugees in the Burj El Bârajneh camp, Beirut.

This initiative, seeks to empower 100 children, aged 6-14, through tailored educational programs, life skills training, and psychological support.

With just $25 per child, you can help bridge critical educational gaps, provide essential life skills, and foster psychological well-being for children. A total of $7,500 every 3 months will enable us to create lasting change in their lives and uplift the entire community.

Key components include:

- 1- Educational Empowerment: Enhancing literacy and numeracy skills, with a target improvement within six months.
- 2- Awareness Sessions: Providing life skills training through monthly workshops.
- 3- Psychological Support: Offering regular activities under the guidance of a social worker to improve the mental well-being of the children.
- 4- Community Engagement: Organizing a collective initiative led by the children and promoting gender-inclusive participation in all activities.

This project is crucial in bridging educational gaps, reducing psychological distress, and fostering community cohesion within the camp.

We look forward to your support and collaboration in making this initiative a success.

Best regards,

سكانيس
